To whom it may concern,

I was planning to install solar panels because it is the right thing to do in Salt Lake City. I might never recoup my initial investment but it would help the city to use less polluting methods of getting electricity, and with our winter air being some of the most polluted in the country, that would be a good thing. We should be doing all that we can to encourage people to install solar panels here because Salt Lake gets so much sunshine during the year.

Charging a monthly fee to those who have solar panels would discourage a lot of people from installing solar panels. Please consider this decision carefully and think about your children and grandchildren.

Sincerely,
