This past March, I invested over $10,000 of my discretionary income to install solar panels on my house. I am a 62 year old woman with no children, but feel strongly that as a community, we need to explore alternative energy sources to decrease our reliance on coal - for future generations and for Utah's natural resources, such as our Parks.

I was an early adopter of Rocky Mountain's Blue Sky project and willingly paid extra every month. Now I understand that Rocky Mountain Power wants to increase my bill $4.25 per month simply because I have invested in clean energy. While I have no problem ELECTING to support a Blue Sky project, I strongly oppose Rocky Mountain Power MANDATING a fee (tax) on my solar panels because of a personal choice. I would encourage the Public Service Commission to deny this request.
