Dear Utah Public Services Commission,

I request that the PSC to DENY Rocky Mountain Power's request for a monthly fee to utility customers with solar systems on their property. Renewable solar energy is by nature a diffuse energy source which actually helps Rocky Mountain Power mitigate their use of carbon emitting power generation technology. Basically they are asking for a non-carbon tax when no carbon tax exists. Solar technology is now at a point where it is both affordable to private homeowners and can provide clean energy for consumer use. One should consider that the small savings from investment in a solar cells will allow the owner to spend the difference in the community where it will generate additional economic stimulus, rather than being passed on to an outside corporation which will spend the monies in another state.

Thank you.
