Just to add my voice to many others...

I find this new area code "sharing" to be a horrible idea. Could we not have a more of a geographically defined area code? At some point, there was an option to make the Salt lake Valley its own area code island. That would be much better because people would just know the area code because of location. I know that when I call Park City or Tooele, it is going to be 435.

I heard that there was some "public voting" involved, but nobody I know heard anything about it. Perhaps this should be a ballot issue where more people will be able to give their input.

All I know is that it is going to be a lot more difficult to call people when, over time, half my neighborhood will be 385 and the rest 801. Or I cannot tell which of my customers have which area code.

No need to respond. Just add my complaint to the rest.

Thanks
