Thank you Utah Public Service Commission and Rocky Mountain Power for proposing the prototype net zero community with the Sustainable Transportation and Energy Plan. <http://www.sltrib.com/home/3103917-155/rocky-mountain-power> . . .

Please count me in for an electric car and a subscription for more solar blocks for reducing emissions in Utah. Your renewed vision for accelerating the move away from coal burning and into more solar power generation is inspirational and laudatory. It renews our confidence in the ethical stewardship of our power system.

When more people are given this opportunity to live with the proven results and see the measurable benefits for themselves, even the deniers will begin embrace this solution and we can finally make meaningful progress into a better future toward our common good of 25% clean renewables by 2015. http://petitions.moveon.org/sign/utah-needs-clean-energy?source=s.icn.em.mt&r_by=5320002
