Announcement Date:	March 29, 2006
Effective Date:	April 29, 2006
Document Number:	SYST.03.29.06.F.03780.FinalResaleProdDBRet.doc
Notification Category:	Systems Notification
Target Audience:	CLECs, Resellers
Subject:	Final Announcement / Reminder – Resale Product Database Retirement
Associated CR# or System Name and Number	Qwest CR# SCR 062105-01

Qwest is sending this notice as a thirty day reminder courtesy notice regarding the retirement of the Resale Product Database (RPD) scheduled for April 29, 2006. Effective on this date, all references to the RPD, including associated links to the system and corresponding documentation, will be removed from the Qwest Web site (<http://www.qwest.com/>). Please note that this is the final systems notice regarding retirement of the RPD. Any corresponding PCAT documentation changes will be announced through the Product/Process notification protocols.

On August 2, 2005, Qwest notified the customer community of its intent to retire the Resale Product Database (RPD). Qwest sent systems notification number SYST.08.02.05.F.03156.RPDRetire1stNotImpPlan advising of the retirement, and to provide the retirement plan. On August 3, 2005, Qwest issued related notification SYST.08.03.05.F.03159.RPDRetire1stNotCorrection to correct a date related to the comment cycle.

In notification SYST.08.02.05.F.03156.RPDRetire1stNotImpPlan, Qwest stated that, effective April 29, 2006, Qwest will retire the Resale Product Database (RPD) from the list of Operational Support Systems (OSS). With the retirement of the RPD, reference to the RPD will be removed from the Qwest Operations Support System (OSS) Release Calendar and the Change Request form.

Additional information associated with SCR 062105-01 can be found at <http://www.qwest.com/wholesale/cmp/changerequest.html>.

Rationale for Retirement and Alternative Information Channels

1. Qwest is retiring the RPD as part of an overall business strategy to streamline documentation processes and to gain efficiencies in the way documentation is maintained and presented externally. As cited in AI031903-1, Qwest has already undertaken efforts to provide critical customer information in other documentation including the Product Catalogs (PCATs), business procedures, and Local Service Ordering Guidelines (LSOG).

As part of the RPD retirement timeline, should a CLEC discern that information in the RPD is not captured in Qwest's other documentation, Qwest has established protocols for requesting updates to those documents. Information on the process, and forms for submitting requested updates, are available on Qwest's Wholesale Web site at <http://www.qwest.com/wholesale/customerService/clecs.html>

2. Qwest believes that the RPD has become a low-utility tool. Based on access data, Qwest concludes that the other vehicles are the preferred information source for customers, and that minimal requests to access the RPD do not justify its continued maintenance.

Qwest will continue on schedule for the retirement of the RPD. The timeline appears below.

Timeline:

Courtesy Reminder Notice Issued	As a courtesy, 30 days prior to the official retirement, Qwest will publish a Systems notification reminder to the CLEC community.	March 29, 2006

#	Page/Section	CLEC Comment	Qwest Response
1	N/A	Eschelon 08/17/05 During the Ad hoc call on August 17, 2005, Eschelon raised concerns that in Iowa, and maybe Colorado, there was litigation regarding discriminating access to Qwest's M&Ps, to assure that the M&Ps were not discriminatory and different than the Process that Wholesale uses. Eschelon objected to Qwest retiring the database based on the view that there was existing litigation to not discriminate.	Qwest has researched the verbal objection raised by Eschelon in regards to the retirement of RPD and a non-discrimination obligation and has responded directly to them with our findings. Qwest believes it is in compliance with our obligations through our existing PCATs, Business Procedures and LSOG documentation and plans to move forward with the retirement of RPD in April 2006.
