RE: Engineer Plan Review Fee

Back in 2004 when WaterPro became regulated by the Public Utility Commission it was required to file an approved Tariff indicating all the culinary water fees the company charged to residences and developers. It was brought to our attention this past year that the Tariff filed with the Commission was not up to date and in fact had a typo error leading back to 2004.

The 2004 Tariff read as follows:

Engineering Plan Review and Service Availability Letter	$515.00
Engineering Fee (typo error)	$3.00 plus $0.30/foot over 1,200 feet of water lines for Company staff and Company Engineer project and plan review. This fee includes facilities design review.
Engineering Fee (should have read)	$300.00 plus $0.30/foot over 1,200 feet of water lines for Company staff and Company Engineer project and plan review. This fee includes facilities design review.

The Engineering fees charged to you as a developer from WaterPro are a passed through fee from our outside engineering firm for plan reviews, system modeling, GIS database updates, insuring fire flow requirements are met, extension agreement development fee, and coordination of plans between WaterPro & the Engineering Firm.

You as a developer have never been over charged a fee that WaterPro hasn't already incurred.

It is time we update our current Tariff with the Commission to read as follows:

Engineering Plan Review	$580.00
Engineering Fee	$650.00 for the first 500 feet. $0.50 per foot for everything over 500 feet.

To see a complete notice of the amended Tariff filing on January 12, 2015 please go to our website at www.waterpro.net.

You are welcome to attend the hearing that has been set for February 4, 2015 beginning at 12:01 p.m. This hearing will be on the fourth floor of the Heber M. Wells Building at 160 East 300 South in Salt Lake City, Utah.

If you have questions please call me at 801-571-2232.
