His daughters power is the one that went out. The power was off for 3 days and it burned out the light bulbs when the power came back on. The fire department was at her neighbors house because there was something smoking. His daughters computer, Microwave, T.V., VCR, and furnace were broken because when they turned the power back on, they must've put 220 instead of 110 into the line. He is concerned that this was never mentioned in any of the news programs or in the newspaper.
