To Whom it May Concern,

I am writing to express my support for continued subsidies for residential and commercial solar power systems. Utah's air quality is some of the dirtiest in the nation, and this negatively impacts the health and welfare of our residents.

Currently, solar power is not as cost-effective of a power source as coal, so it is highly unlikely that most people will install panels without an extra financial incentive. It is definitely worth the extra cost to our community because our whole community benefits when we clean up our air. We need to start subsidizing energy sources that are beneficial to the long term health and welfare of humans, instead of subsidizing coal and other fossil fuels which degrade the health and welfare of humans.

Thank you for your time.

Sincerely,
Jen Shake
