Like Abel Thompson (see email comment January 8, 2014) , I am a net metering customer since this summer. I largely agree with his comments and like to be on record seconding his objections to the proposed net-metering fee.

On a more personal note:

We were happy to have "won" the RMP rebate lotto, because it put us in a position to do the right thing for the environment, while breaking even in a financial sense (after rebate and tax credits).

With the additional charge, in addition to the base rate of $5 and the minimum use rate of $2 per month in summer, we may NEVER fully recoup our investment.

I am still happy with our green power, just a little upset that RMP effectively is asking for the rebate back in monthly installments of $4.25 (a total of $1500 over the thirty year life of the panels).
