Dear Utah Public Services Commission,

Please deny Rocky Mountain Power's request for a monthly fee on utility customers who install solar power systems on their property. Utah power is mostly generated by coal, which has costs that are not passed on to consumers, such as carbon emissions and pollution. Solar power is clean and renewable, so we ought to be rewarding and incentivizing people who install these systems, not penalizing them. Any extra costs that Rocky Mountain Power incurs due to solar should be passed on to the rest of its customers who rely on coal, to better capture the costs to the environment.

Thank you very much.
