Rocky Mountain Power has not calculated “true costs” of their business plan for decades. They must now be required to do so. In order to accomplish this, I suggest:

all environmental and societal externality costs should be specifically identified and assessed by a neutral third party, not PacifiCorp; all IRP resource models and portfolios acknowledge the full range of monetized externality costs; and, every biennial IRP process will include a technical review of the latest externalities research.

Thank you,
