Former Dodger Steve Sax sets out to honor Marine he calls 'my hero'

By DANIEL BROWN
The Orange County Register

Roseville, Calif. » There is only a smattering of baseball memorabilia on display in Steve Sax's home office, a show of restraint considering he was a five-time All-Star.

His Rookie of the Year trophy is nowhere to be found. There is no Silver Slugger Award on a shelf. Neither World Series ring resides on a finger.

Instead, Sax's most cherished possessions abound just out of sight. And on a rainy afternoon in this Sacramento suburb, he is in a nostalgic mood.

"Oh, I wanted to show you something," Sax said.

The Los Angeles Dodgers sparkplug rises from behind his desk and returns with a treasure. He lifts a delicate glass cover to unveil one of his favorite art pieces.

It's a misshapen model airplane with all the hallmarks of a grade-school project. The lumpy black body is made of clay. Two red marbles serve as the jet's afterburners while one green one represents the landing gear.

"So, he made that for me," Sax, 64, said. "He was in the fourth or fifth grade. And he said, 'Dad, I'm gonna be an aviator someday.'"

John was 8 years old when a friend of the family, a former Navy pilot, took him up in a single-engine World War II Soviet fighter called the Yakovlev Yak. They tooled around skyways above Northwest Oregon and for John, it was love at first flight. After that, the only place he wanted to be was in the sky.

Rich Ward, the pilot that day, had seen this phenomenon before. "There are some unusual people where you take them up one time and it's over," he said by phone. "Flying is what they're going to do. I think they were reincarnated: they used to be birds."

John Sax was so obsessed with flying that other youthful pursuits, such as baseball, barely registered. A ball once sailed over John's head as if undetected during a Little League game. Oddly, the kid looked skyward the whole time but never budged.

More baffled than angry, Sax asked little Johnny after the game why he didn't, you know, try to catch it.

"I saw the ball," the kid protested, "but, Dad, did you see the C-130 going by? Each one of those engines costs 7 million dollars!"

Sax, a second baseman who played for the Yankees, White Sox and A's as well as the Dodgers in a 14-year major league career, laughed as he recounted that story. Soon he was out of his seat again, this time reaching into a display case. He pulled down a poem encased in a silver frame.

It's called "My Dad: by John Sax." The outdated font suggests it rolled out of a home printer in the early 1990s. It reads, in part:

My dad was with me
when I was born
I know he'll be beside me through every storm

"Johnny wrote that for me when he was a little boy," Sax said. "He won first prize in a contest."

Another item in Sax's collection, however, remained undisturbed. He does not rise to get it. He merely

DIVISION OF WASTE MANAGEMENT AND RADIATION CONTROL
NOTICE OF PUBLIC COMMENT ON

Clean Harbors Grassy Mountain Facility
Request for a Site-Specific Treatment Variance for High Subcategory Mercury
UTD991301748

The Director of the Division of Waste Management and Radiation Control is seeking public comment on a request from Clean Harbors Grassy Mountain, LLC (CHGM) for a site-specific treatment variance. CHGM proposes to treat bulk house dust waste containing High Subcategory Mercury by stabilization instead of retort and recovery. The variance proposes to treat the waste to meet the Universal Treatment Standard (UTS) of 0.025 mg/L TCLP. CHGM has conducted treatability studies to demonstrate that they can successfully treat this waste to meet the UTS. CHGM will verify that the treated waste meets the standard prior to disposing of it in a hazardous waste disposal cell at the Facility.

A 30-day public comment period to receive comments on the Treatment Variance Request will commence on Thursday, May 2, 2024, and end at 5:00 p.m. on Friday, May 31, 2024.

Documents related to this application can be reviewed at the Division of Waste Management and Radiation Control Public Notices website at https://deq.utah.gov/public-notices-archive/waste-management-radiation-control-public-notices. Site-Specific Treatment Variance Request for the Macroencapsulation of Lithium and Lithium-Ion Batteries at the EnergySolutions Clive Facility EnergySolutions requests approval to receive an exemption from Utah Administrative Code (UAC) R315-268-40 and R315-268-45 for the direct macroencapsulation treatment of lithium and lithium-ion batteries.

Lithium and lithium-ion batteries typically exhibit the hazardous characteristics of ignitability (D001) and reactivity (D003). Regulations in UAC R315-268-40 (40 CFR 268.40, 2015 Edition, incorporated by reference) require that these characteristic hazards be deactivated to remove the characteristic prior to land disposal. An alternative, UAC R315-268-45 allows hazardous debris to be treated using an immobilization technology (e.g., macroencapsulation). However, the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) has ruled that intact batteries are containers and not considered debris. Furthermore, the definition of macroencapsulation in R315-268-42 states that "Macroencapsulation specifically does not include any material that would be classified as a tank or container."

In order to meet the regulatory standards described above, lithium and lithium-ion batteries would need to be shredded and mixed with chemicals to deactivate them; or punctured (and then considered debris) to macroencapsulate them. Both of these activities (shredding and puncturing) severely agitate the waste and would expose the reactive portion of the waste to open air which could cause an adverse reaction or explosion. Although this type of waste management is possible, from a safety and health standpoint, it is inappropriate.

EnergySolutions proposes to manage this waste by directly macroencapsulating the intact batteries. Macroencapsulation is a permitted treatment technology that isolates hazardous waste from the environment, eliminating the potential for harmful reactions from occurring to the environment. Macroencapsulation requires less handling of the waste and creates a waste form for disposal that is protective of human health and the environment. Macroencapsulation requires less handling of the waste and creates a waste form for disposal that is protective of human health and the environment.

Final disposal of the waste will occur in the Mixed Waste Disposal Cell at the EnergySolutions Mixed Waste Facility.

A 30-day public comment period to receive comments on the Macroencapsulation of Lithium and Lithium-Ion Batteries will commence on Thursday, May 2, 2024 and end at 5 p.m. on Friday, May 31, 2024.
