Spanish Fork, Murray to receive EPA grants

BY KYLE DUNPHEY
Utah News Dispatch

Two cities in northern Utah are set to see a combined $1 million in federal funds to help assess areas that were polluted by heavy metals from landfills and mines.

On Monday, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency announced two $500,000 grants for Murray and Spanish Fork as part of the agency’s Brownfields program, which has provided almost $3 billion to clean up contaminated areas since 1995.

“EPA’s Brownfields grants are supporting critical cleanup and redevelopment projects in Utah,” EPA Regional Administrator KC Becker said in a statement. “Today’s funding will help community leaders in Murray and Spanish Fork address contamination in soil, water and outdoor spaces and create new businesses, housing and recreational opportunities.”

In Spanish Fork, that money will be used to assess two areas designated as priority sites by the EPA: the Expressway Landfill and the Foundry.

The Expressway Landfill — described as a “site containing multiple former unregulated landfills” in a 2021 news release from the EPA — is a 40-acre site divided into 13 parcels. The site has been problematic for years, with the Utah County Health Department condemning it in 2001 due to methane gas leaking from the capped landfill, according to a Deseret News story at the time.

In 2021, Spanish Fork was awarded $300,000 to assess and redevelop several contaminated sites, including the Expressway Landfill. According to the EPA, the landfill has elevated concentrations of lead, arsenic and chromium in the soil and benzene and arsenic in groundwater.

The EPA says this latest round of funding will help with “further site investigation and cleanup planning to understand the environmental impacts preventing the property from being redeveloped.”

“This grant will also give the city the opportunity to plan for the redevelopment of areas that are underutilized and have been used industrially,” said Spanish Fork Mayor Mike Mendenhall in a statement. “I thank the EPA for their grant funding and continued support as we work to make Spanish Fork a great place to live and work.”

The second site is where the Spanish Fork-based company Foundry has been manufacturing industrial iron, steel and aluminum castings since 1884. Prior to environmental regulations, hazardous chemicals like volatile organic compounds, heavy metals and polychlorinated biphenyls were used at the site. Now, the EPA says the area needs to be assessed “to determine whether the site is safe for redevelopment.”

In a news release, the EPA said Spanish Fork will use that $500,000 to “create opportunities for development, including affordable housing and new commercial spaces.” The agency hopes revitalization will help increase employment opportunities for locals while generating tax revenue.

In Murray, the $500,000 grant will also be used to assess two sites — the Creek Pocket Park and the Soccer Locker.

The Creek Pocket Park is a vacant parcel that the city hopes to develop into a small park alongside Little Cottonwood Creek. The site is located near the now-defunct Murray smelters, which was once the largest lead smelter in the country. In 1994

Provo mulling bridge repair, road expansion on 820 North but residents have concerns

BY CURTIS BOOKER
Daily Herald

Provo City wants to give the bridge at 820 North and 850 West a makeover. The structure, built in 1960, sits on top of the Provo River and trail.

The city’s public works department says with growth in the area, the 64-year-old structure is nearing its lifespan and no longer meets the needs for active transportation. According to a website about the project, the bridge’s existing condition has numerous structural issues including the condition of guard rails and deck geometry.

“It’s in bad shape and needs to be repaired,” Public Works Director Gordon Haight told the Daily Herald. “It’s on the state registry as one of the bad bridges that needs replacing.”

Discussions about how to fix the bridge have been happening for some time through dozens of meetings with input from city leaders, City Council members, transportation groups and now local citizens.

Provo Power crew aids in connecting Navajo Nation residences to electricity

BY CURTIS BOOKER
Daily Herald

Until the middle of July, electric line workers from across the country are volunteering in efforts to connect families in the Navajo Nation to a vitally needed resource: electrical power.

In a territory spanning over 27,000 miles serviced by the National Tribal Utility Authority, the realities of living life without electricity aren’t uncommon, as 32% of residents lack access to basic utility services. That rounds out to over 13,000 families who don’t have power, according to NTUA data.

Don Willes, a journeyman line-man with Provo Power, along with three other crew members spent a week helping build and set 30 power poles and pulling wires to connect the homes of Navajo families to the electric grid that have never been connected before.

“We did end up getting to meet some of the people that were in line to start picking up some of that power,” Willes told the Daily Herald.

The work is part of the NTUA’s 2024 Light Up Navajo project, in a mutual aid partnership with the American Public Power Association bringing together utility companies that represent public power, rural cooperatives

Norway, Ireland, Spain will recognize a Palestinian state

BY JOSEPH WILSON,
MELANIE LIDMAN AND
JOSEPH KRAUSS
Associated Press

TEL AVIV, Israel — Norway, Ireland and Spain said Wednesday they would recognize a Palestinian state, a historic but largely symbolic move that further deepens Israel’s isolation more than seven months into its grinding war against Hamas in Gaza. Israel denounced the decisions and recalled its ambassadors to the three countries.

Palestinian officials welcomed the announcements as an affirmation of their decades-long quest for statehood in east Jerusalem, the West Bank and the Gaza Strip — territories Israel seized in the 1967 Mideast war and still controls.

While some 140 countries — more than two-thirds of the United Nations — recognize a Palestinian state, Wednesday’s cascade of announcements could build momentum at a time when even close allies of Israel have piled on criticism for its conduct in Gaza.

The timing of the move was a surprise, but discussions have been underway for weeks in some European Union countries about possibly recognizing a Palestinian state. Proponents have argued that the war has shown the need for a new push toward a two-state solution, 15 years after negotiations collapsed between Israel and the Palestinians. Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu’s government opposes Palestinian statehood.

It was the second blow to Israel’s international reputation this week after the chief prosecutor of the International Criminal Court said he would seek arrest warrants for Netanyahu and his defense minister. The International Court of Justice is also considering allegations of genocide that Israel has strenuously denied.

In addition to recalling the ambassadors to the three countries, Israel summoned their envoys, accusing the Europeans of rewarding the militant Hamas group for its Oct. 7 attack that triggered the war. Foreign Minister Israel Katz said the European ambassadors would watch grisly video footage of the attack.

In that assault, Hamas-led militants stormed across the border, killing 1,200 people and taking some 250 hostage. The ICC prosecutor is also seeking arrest warrants for three Hamas leaders. Israel’s ensuing offensive has killed more than 35,000 Palestinians, according to Gaza’s Health Ministry, and has caused a humanitarian crisis and a near-famine. The ICC prosecutor has accused Israeli leaders of using starvation as a weapon.

“History will remember that Spain, Norway, and Ireland decided to award a gold medal to Hamas murderers and rapists,” Katz said.

In response to the announcements in Europe, Israel’s far-right National Security Minister Itamar Ben-Gvir paid a provocative visit Wednesday to the Al-Aqsa mosque compound — a flashpoint in Jerusalem that is sacred to Muslims and Jews, who refer to it as the Temple Mount.

“We will not even allow a statement about a Palestinian state,” he said.

In further retaliation, Finance Minister Bezalel Smotrich said he would stop transferring tax revenue earmarked for the Palestinian Authority, a move that threatens to handicap its already waning ability to pay salaries to thousands of employees.

Under interim peace accords in the 1990s, Israel collects tax revenue on behalf of the Palestinians, and it has used the money as a tool to pressure the PA. After the Oct. 7 Hamas attack, Smotrich froze the transfers, but Israel agreed to send the money to Norway, which transferred it to the PA. Smotrich said Wednesday that he was ending that arrangement.

U.S. national security adviser Jake Sullivan said the cutoff was “wrong” because it “destabilizes the West Bank” and undermines “the search for security and prosperity for the Palestinian people.”

The international community has viewed the creation of a Palestinian state alongside Israel as the only realistic way to resolve the conflict.

The United States and Britain, among others, back the idea of an independent Palestinian state alongside Israel but say it should come as part of a negotiated settlement. Netanyahu’s government says the conflict can only be resolved through direct negotiations.

The formal recognition by Norway, Spain and Ireland — which all have a record of friendly ties with both the Israelis and the Palestinians, while long advocating for a Palestinian state — is planned for May 28.

Their announcements came in swift succession. Norway, which helped broker the Oslo accords that kicked off the peace process in the 1990s, was the first. “There cannot be peace in the Middle East if there is no recognition,” said Prime Minister Jonas Gahr Støre.

The country plans to upgrade its representative office in the West Bank to an embassy.

Irish Prime Minister Simon Harris called it a “historic and important day for Ireland and for Palestine,” saying the announcements had been coordinated and other countries might join.

Spanish Prime Minister Pedro Sánchez, who announced his country’s decision before parliament, has spent months touring European and Middle Eastern countries to garner support for recognition and a cease-fire in Gaza.

“This recognition is not against anyone, it is not against the Israeli people,” Sánchez said. “It is an act in favor of peace, justice and moral consistency.”

President Mahmoud Abbas, the leader of the Palestinian Authority, which administers parts of the Israeli-occupied West Bank, welcomed the decisions and called on other nations to “recognize our legitimate rights and support the struggle of our people for liberation and independence.”

Hamas, which Western countries and Israel view as a terrorist group, does not recognize Israel’s existence but has indicated it might agree to a state on the 1967 lines, at least on an interim basis. Israel says any Palestinian state would be at risk of being taken over by Hamas, posing a threat to its security.

The announcements are unlikely to have any impact on the war in Gaza — or the long-running conflict between Israel and the Palestinians.

Israel annexed east Jerusalem and considers it part of its capital, and in the occupied West Bank it has built scores of Jewish settlements that are now home to over 500,000 Israelis. The settlers have Israeli citizenship, while the 3 million Palestinians in the West Bank live under seemingly open-ended Israeli military rule.

Netanyahu has said Israel will maintain security control of Gaza even after any defeat of Hamas, and the war is still raging there. An Israeli airstrike early Wednesday killed 10 people, including four women and four children, who had been displaced and were sheltering in central Gaza, according to hospital authorities.

Hugh Lovatt, a senior policy fellow at the European Council on Foreign Relations, said “recognition is a tangible step towards a viable political track leading to Palestinian self-determination.”

To have an impact, he said, it must come with “tangible steps to counter Israel’s annexation and settlement of Palestinian territory — such as banning settlement products and financial services.”

Norwegian Foreign Minister Espen Barth Eide defended the importance of the move in an interview with The Associated Press, saying that while the country has supported the establishment of a Palestinian state for decades, it knew that recognition is “a card that you can play once.”

“We used to think that recognition would come at the end of a process,” he said. “Now we have realized that recognition should come as an impetus, as a strengthening of a process.”

Biden administration canceling student loans for another 160,000 borrowers

BY COLLIN BINKLEY
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Biden administration is canceling student loans for another 160,000 borrowers through a combination of existing programs.

The Education Department announced the latest round of cancellation on Wednesday, saying it will erase $7.7 billion in federal student loans. With the latest action, the administration said it has canceled $167 billion in student debt for nearly 5 million Americans through several programs.

“From day one of my administration, I promised to fight to ensure higher education is a ticket to the middle class, not a barrier to opportunity,” President Joe Biden said in a statement. “I will never stop working to cancel student debt — no matter how many times Republican-elected officials try to stop us.”

The latest relief will go to borrowers in three categories who hit certain milestones that make them eligible for cancellation. It will go to 54,000 borrowers who are enrolled in Biden’s new income-driven repayment plan, along with 39,000 enrolled in earlier income-driven plans, and about 67,000 who are eligible through the Public Service Loan Forgiveness program.

Biden’s new payment plan, known as the SAVE Plan, offers a faster path to forgiveness than earlier versions. More people are now becoming eligible for loan cancellation as they hit 10 years of payments, a new finish line that’s a decade sooner than what borrowers faced in the past.

The cancellation is moving forward even as Biden’s SAVE Plan faces legal challenges from Republican-led states. A group of 11 states led by Kansas sued to block the plan in March, followed by seven more led by Missouri in April. In two federal lawsuits, the states say Biden needed to go through Congress for his overhaul of federal repayment plans.

A separate action by the Biden administration aimed to correct previous mis-

Education Secretary Miguel Cardona testifies during a Senate Appropriations Subcommittee on Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education, and Related Agencies hearing on Capitol Hill in Washington on April 30.

takes that delayed cancellation for some borrowers enrolled in other repayment plans and through Public Service Loan Forgiveness, which forgives loans for people who make 10 years of payments while working in public service jobs.

The Biden administration has been announcing new batches of forgiveness each month as more people qualify under those three categories.

According to the Education Department, 1 in 10 federal student loan borrowers has now been approved for some form of loan relief.

“One out of every 10 federal student loan borrowers approved for debt relief means one out of every 10 borrowers now has financial breathing room and a burden lifted,” Education Secretary Miguel Cardona said in a statement.

The Biden administration has continued canceling loans through existing avenues while it also pushes for a new, one-time cancellation that would provide relief to more than 30 million borrowers in five categories.

Biden’s new plan aims to help borrowers with large sums of unpaid interest, those with older loans, those who attended low-value college programs, and those who face other hardships preventing them from repaying student loans. It would also cancel loans for people who are eligible through other programs but haven’t applied.

The proposal is going through a lengthy rulemaking process, but the administration said it will accelerate certain provisions, with plans to start waiving unpaid interest for millions of borrowers starting this fall.

Conservative opponents have threatened to challenge that plan too, calling it an unfair bonus for wealthy college graduates at the expense of taxpayers who didn’t attend college or already repaid their loans.

The Supreme Court rejected Biden’s earlier attempt at one-time cancellation, saying it overstepped the president’s authority. The new plan is being made with a different legal justification.

Study: Daily pot use outpaces daily drinking in the US

BY CARLA K. JOHNSON
Associated Press

For the first time, the number of Americans who use marijuana just about every day has surpassed the number who drink that often, a shift some 40 years in the making as recreational pot use became more mainstream and legal in nearly half of U.S. states.

In 2022, an estimated 17.7 million people reported using marijuana daily or near-daily compared to 14.7 million daily or near-daily drinkers, according to an analysis of national survey data. In 1992, when daily pot use hit a low point, less than 1 million people said they used marijuana nearly every day.

Alcohol is still more widely used, but 2022 was the first time this intensive level of marijuana use overtook daily and near-daily drinking, said the study’s author, Jonathan Caulkins, a cannabis policy researcher at Carnegie Mellon University.

“A good 40% of current cannabis users are using it daily or near daily, a pattern that is more associated with tobacco use than typical alcohol use,” Caulkins said.

The research, based on data from the National Survey on Drug Use and Health, was published Wednesday in the journal Addiction. The survey is a highly regarded source of self-reported estimates of tobacco, alcohol and drug use in the United States.

From 1992 to 2022, the per capita rate of reporting daily or near-daily marijuana use increased 15-fold. Caulkins acknowledged in the study that people may be more willing to report marijuana use as public acceptance grows, which could boost the increase.

Most states now allow medical or recreational marijuana, though it remains illegal at the federal level. In November, Florida voters will decide on a constitutional amendment allowing recreational cannabis, and the federal government is moving to reclassify marijuana as a less dangerous drug.

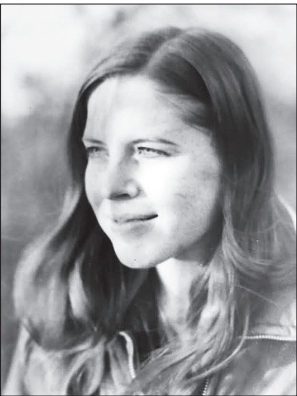

Research shows that high-frequency users are more likely to become addicted to marijuana, said Dr. David A. Gorelick, a psychiatry professor at the University of Maryland School of Medicine, who was not involved in the study.

The number of daily users suggests that more people are at risk for developing problematic cannabis use or addiction, Gorelick said.

“High frequency use also increases the risk of developing cannabis-associated psychosis,” a severe condition where a person loses touch with reality, he said.

the EPA proposed listing the Murray smelters on the Superfund program's National Priorities List, although that was never finalized, according to agency documents.

Since then, two on-site smoke stacks have been demolished, with lead and arsenic contaminated soil being removed. The EPA continues to monitor the site, and the recent grant will help the city assess the prevalence of lead, asbestos, arsenic, cadmium and other heavy metals.

Also located alongside Little Cottonwood Creek is a site called the Soccer Locker, a 2.7-acre parcel that according to prior EPA investigations has high levels of arsenic and other heavy metals that the agency says is likely mine waste.

The assessment of the Soccer Locker will help Murray develop it into a mix of affordable housing and commercial buildings "to improve employment opportunities and resident quality of life," the EPA said in a news release. "Assessment of this site will revitalize a blighted property into a space that will relieve housing burdens and food deserts in the area."

Bridge

From A1

On Tuesday evening, the Public Works engineering department briefed residents who live on 820 North and surrounding areas during a neighborhood meeting at Exchange Park about their plans to rebuild the bridge and hear their concerns surrounding potential community impacts.

A similar meeting is scheduled for next week with people who reside on the east side of the thoroughfare.

The Mountainland Association of Governments allocated just over $12 million in Provo sales tax funds two years ago to rebuild the bridge.

The current width of the bridge is about 40 feet, which provides one lane apiece for drivers traveling east and west, with a 5-foot sidewalk on both sides of the bridge.

"It's nerve-racking," Haight explained to the dozens of citizens who showed up to Tuesday's meeting. "It's too narrow; it puts you too close (to the road). It's not good for bike passage."

The department says revamping the bridge will enhance safety, creating smoother pathways for pedestrians and cyclists. The city estimates roughly 11,000 cars pass over the bridge per day as well as the hundreds of thousands who walk or bike along the bridge and trail.

As design plans are still being developed, officials are wrestling with what the width of the road through the arterial should be. Options include a three-lane or five-lane configuration. Either scenario creates additional room for biking and walking.

While the immediate topic at hand revolves around shoring up the bridge, residents are grappling with the potential of even further developments. Plans are afoot to widen 820 North to five lanes with a new Interstate 15 interchange, which is prompting concerns of significant impacts to people's homes and quality of life.

Residents who live along 820 North and around the area don't disagree that the bridge has become a safety concern, but fixing it shouldn't come at the cost of the community, they say.

"I'm in favor of replacing the bridge. I believe wholeheartedly that it needs to be done," said Kat Linford. "But I don't agree with a five-lane proposal. I think it just brings in more traffic and it destroys our neighborhoods. Three lanes — great, let's do it. But five is too much."

During the meeting, Linford raised concerns about how a five-lane road could encourage more traffic through their residential neighborhood and how the city would regulate traffic speeds. "You go to a five-lane road, what is that new speed limit? And then how fast are people gonna go on top of that posted speed limit?" she asked.

According to Haight, a full-road widening on 820 North may not happen for at least another 15-20 years, if at all. He says the project likely would be handled through the Utah Department of Transportation due to the hefty funding a project of that stature would require.

"I empathize with residents. That is something that is devastating to neighborhoods. ... So we're looking at ways to mitigate it, keep neighborhoods connected," Haight said.

In regard to fixing the bridge, the city anticipates the following adjustments, according to the project's website:

- A safe, comfortable facility that will serve the community for the next 75 years.

- A wider, upgraded trail crossing with more space for people biking and walking.

- Wider sidewalks that allow safer access for people walking and using strollers and wheelchairs.

Haight says a final decision on a configuration could be made sometime in late June. Construction is anticipated to start in the spring of 2025 and would last for seven to eight months.

Residents are encouraged to attend an open house June 6 at the Provo Recreation Center for a further discussion. "We think that's important not just to hear ourselves. But here everybody and the mayor (Michelle Kaufusi) is very conscientious that we don't ignore the residents' concerns, and so that that has been critical to her that we do this," Haight said.

Electricity

and independent system operators, according to the agency's website.

The partnership began in 2019, and in that year, over 200 regional families were able to receive electricity. In 2023, the project's efforts powered up 159 homes.

Efforts hit a brief snag due to COVID-19, though the NTUA continued on its mission and extended power to several hundred homes in 2020. Provo Power had initially signed up to help in both 2020 and 2021 but was unable to make the trip because of restrictions on the reservation related to the pandemic.

"Now they've just gotten to the point where they've opened it back up for any help they can get, so they're getting quite a response. But we (were) working with crews from all across the nation," Willes said.

This year, around 42 electric companies from 16 states are participating in Light Up Navajo through July 20. The goal is to connect at least 200 homes to the electric grid.

The Navajo Nation encompasses a portion of each state in the Four Corners region: Utah, Arizona, New Mexico and Colorado. The four-person Provo Power crew that participated focused on a section of Arizona somewhere between Tuba City and Page, arriving May 12 and returning home a week later.

Light Up Navajo supplied needed materials, while Provo Power supplied their own trucks and equipment needed to do the work.

"We are grateful for the outside utilities who want to help bring positive change for families waiting for electricity," NTUA General Manager Walter Haase said in a press release. "The communities these utilities represent learned about our challenges and were prompted to be a part of this dramatically meaningful project."

For Willes and the Provo Power crew who traveled to northern Arizona, they were able to electrify at least one home in their assigned area and had the opportunity to meet some of the residents. "They're pretty grateful for having all these people come down, and they understand they're leaving their families," Willes said.

Scott Bunker, assistant director of Provo Power, says they've been working closely with the Navajo Nation and their first time participating on-site proved to be a success. It's unclear at this time if the electricity provider will send volunteers again in the future, but it is likely. "We felt the project aligns perfectly because our goal as a municipal utility is to provide safe, reliable power and the modern benefits electricity provides such as lighting, heating, air conditioning and refrigeration of food to the citizens of Provo," Bunker said. "Based on the success of this one, we may participate in future opportunities in coming years."

Willes said being able to step in and provide a service addressing a vital need such as basic electricity is part of the fabric of what municipal power companies do, no matter the location. "When linemen get a call to go help, that's what they do. They do it all across the nation, (for) everybody, including the Navajo Nation," he said.

Scaremongers

Have you heard about the “bee-pocalypse?” My new video explains. Honeybees are dying! It’s another environmental crisis we’re supposed to worry about. The media call it “bee-pocalypse” and “bee-mageddon!” A YouTube video with 15 million views says bee-mageddon “could lead to millions of people starving!”

JOHN STOSSEL

Even Fox News shrieked, “Do you like to eat? The disappearance of honeybees could have a drastic impact on our nation’s food supply!” It’s nonsense. Now, it’s true that, about 20 years ago, many American bees did die. Beekeepers opened hives and found their bees gone. Scientists called it “colony collapse disorder.” No one knows what caused it. After the initial dramatic reports, it’s steadily diminished. But media hysteria hasn’t. Beekeepers adjusted to colony collapse. They divided remaining colonies to make new hives. Bee numbers increased by millions.

“We’re not in any way facing an apocalypse,” says Science journalist Jon Entine. “Things have never been better in terms of the numbers of bees.”

Entine runs the Genetic Literacy Project, which challenges scientific misinformation. I remind him that the media continue to run scare stories. “Bees are dying at an alarming rate,” says NBC.

CNN headlines: “Bee Population is Dying ... the food we eat is at risk!”

It’s so stupid. “They could have just Googled bee population and they would’ve seen them going up?” I ask.

“Absolutely,” responds Entine, “it’s farcical.”

In 2013, Time Magazine’s cover predicted “A World Without Bees”! “I don’t remember seeing Time apologize,” I tell Entine.

“Time has not even written a new article that puts this in science perspective,” he responds. Nor did The New York Times Magazine correct its cover story on “The Insect Apocalypse.” They just “skipped on to another ‘crisis.’”

“Catastrophe, exaggeration,” he says, “That gets the clicks.”

Entine complains that the media rarely interview serious scientists for its scare stories.

“They have the Environmental Working Group or Pesticide Action Network framing these issues ... Hysteria generates donations. The oxygen for these organizations is money.”

Sadly, “Many of these (environment) groups harm people.”

How? By convincing gullible politicians to ban fertilizers and new pesticides even though the new chemicals are usually safer.

For example, even with world-wide honeybee populations at record highs, the European Union prohibited the use of noenitoids, a common insecticide, out of fear they might kill bees.

That means farmers use older, more dangerous chemicals that actually do kill bees.

But why use these chemicals at all?

I push back at Entine, “‘Natural’ food advocates say: ‘Organic! You don’t have to have chemicals! Buy organic and you don’t get them!’” Entine laughs and says, “They use chemicals extensively! It’s not like organic farmers can sprinkle organic fairy dust to get rid of insects and weeds.”

Instead, they use “natural” chemicals “like copper sulfate,” he says, “one of the most toxic chemicals in the world!”

Sri Lanka’s president listened to activists and banned chemical fertilizers.

Suddenly, farms produced much less food. Prices rose 80%.

Sri Lankans invaded the presidential mansion and the president fled his country.

The new government re-legalized chemical fertilizers. Only then could the crisis end.

“This attack on industrial chemicals,” says Entine, “is really a way for the environmental industry, industry is what it is, to go after what they call big (agriculture), big corporations. It’s an anti-capitalist movement.”

The anti-capitalists oppose genetically modified organisms (GMOs). They’ve persuaded most European countries to basically ban GMO crops.

But genetic modification allows farmers to grow more food on less land. It creates plants resistant to disease and insects. That allows farmers to use fewer pesticides. That’s good for everyone, especially poor people.

In Bangladesh, scientists invented a GMO eggplant.

“It decreased use of chemicals by 85%,” says Entine. “Allowing women and children who do most of the farming to live a much more viable life. We have to be smart about these things!”

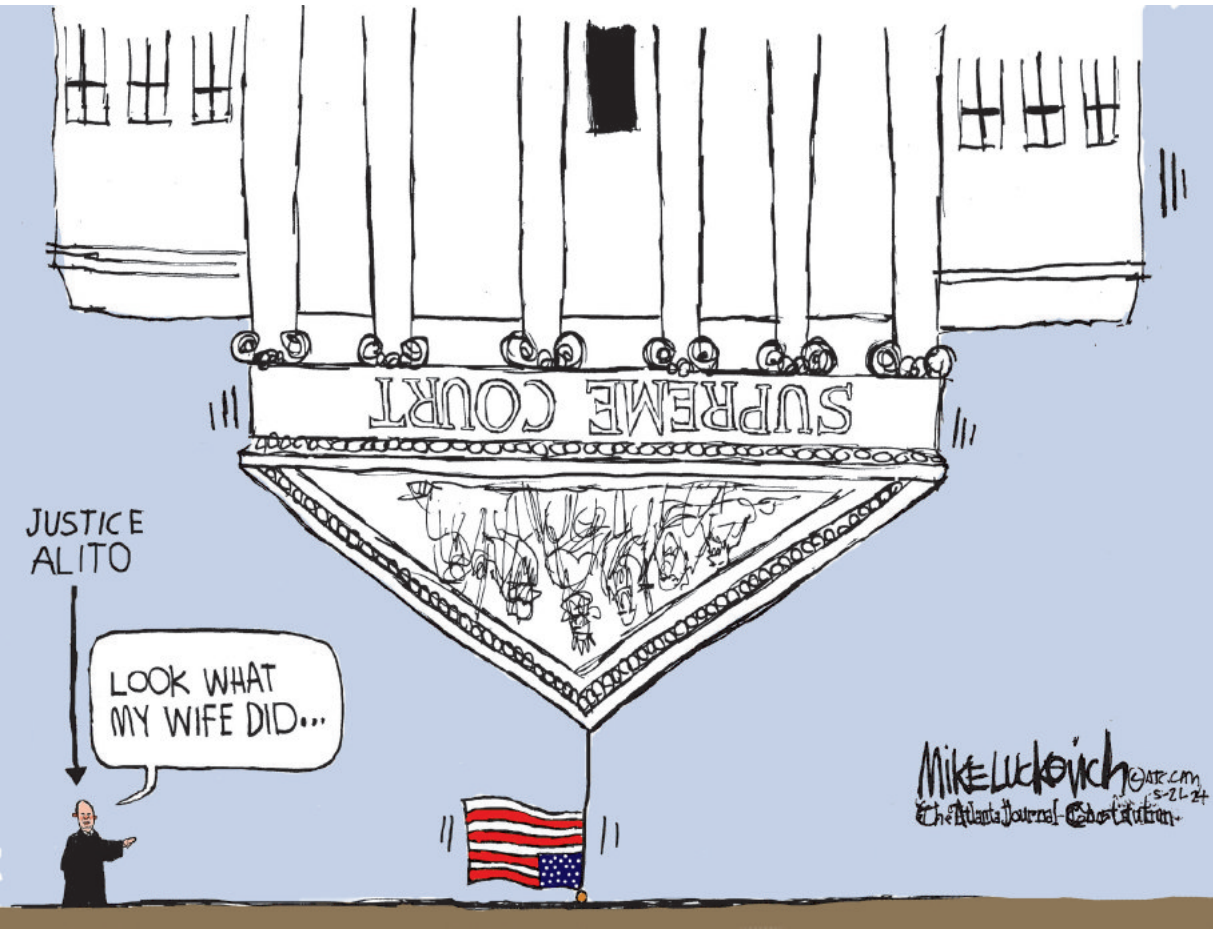

“We’re not being smart,” I note.

“No,” he says, “We’re following an outdated 40-year-old environmental script that doesn’t work in this technologically innovative world. ... They hurt the very people they claim to help.”

Modern chemicals and GMOs make our food cheaper and safer.

Deceitful money-hungry environmental groups won’t acknowledge that.

The Supreme Court vs. democracy

WASHINGTON — The silence from the Supreme Extreme Court is deafening. News broke that a Republican member’s house flew a “Stop the Steal” American flag days after the Jan. 6 mob attack on the Capitol.

This kind of defiance, actually applauding the violent takeover of democracy, is unheard of in the annals of the Supreme Court.

Justice Samuel Alito should be gone from the court. Today. He can take his lethal blow against legal abortion with him.

The Princeton man was on the warpath to reverse Roe v. Wade his entire career. Finally, he authored the Dobbs decision in 2022, dismissing law on reproductive rights as “egregiously wrong.”

The New York Times reported Alito’s flag, leaving us to wonder why it took more than three years).

What an outrage.

Yet Alito expressed no remorse and refuses to recuse himself from Jan. 6 cases. His haughty non-denial is in character.

“I had no involvement whatsoever in the flying of the flag,” Alito claimed. “It was briefly placed by Mrs. Alito in response to a neighbor’s use of objectionable and personally insulting language on yard signs.”

Oh, so the Alitos can do pretty much anything they want?

Legal circles know Alito is an aggressive judge and a cauldron of anger against all who differ with him. He heckled former President Barack Obama during a State of the Union address, which is not “done” in decorum.

The high court is not governed by an enforced ethics code. Alito and his political twin on the bench, Clarence Thomas, take fancy, free vacations and plush gifts from “dark money” donors. Former Justice Antonin Scalia died at a high-class hunting resort in Texas.

Back in Virginia, Alito acts as if his wife got on a ladder and placed the upside-down flag flying on the house herself — and he never noticed.

Traditionally, the upside-down flag symbol means distress or danger. Insurrectionists gave it new meaning.

The least we could expect from Alito is an apology. Or Chief Justice John Roberts should rebuke this political and personal statement. Failing that, the Senate Judiciary Committee has a job to do — close monitoring of the marble court across the street.

Is Judiciary Chairman Dick Durbin (D-Ill.) quite well? At 79, he’s weary and has seen better days. He’s no match for the excesses of Alito and Thomas.

Sen. Sheldon Whitehouse (D-R.I.) has made a mission of exposing the “captured” Supreme Court. The Federalist Society fixed the three Trump appointments, he says.

The energetic expert, Whitehouse, should become the new chairman. Today.

For all we hear of “checks and balances,” the nine Supreme Court justices now answer to no one while they rule the land. The Constitution is flawed that way.

Alito and Thomas (and their wives) take full advantage of their impunity. Ginni Thomas also supported “Stop the Steal” and attended former President Donald Trump’s Jan. 6 rally.

Let’s look at how far from Brown v. Board of Education we are. That landmark ruling, which struck down school segregation, just hit its 70th anniversary. The Earl Warren court, a force for fairness, feels as far away as the moon.

Instead of expanding rights and participation, the Roberts court stole a human right away from women and girls: to decide on our own life, liberty and destiny. Never before has that happened in American history.

In an extreme example, it’s torture to force a girl to carry a pregnancy to term when she has been raped, human rights experts say.

The 6-3 Roberts court has little public trust, as polling shows. Five of the six majority Republicans were named by presidents who lost the popular vote: Trump and George W. Bush.

Roberts is no Warren.

This town gives Roberts a pass because he acts like he cares what people think. But he doesn’t vote that way.

Roberts’ real doppelganger is Roger Taney, the chief justice who ruled in 1857 that Blacks, whether free or enslaved, could never be citizens. That Dred Scott case inflamed the North, starting the fire of the Civil War.

Alito is making a mockery of the Supreme Court, and another reckoning is coming this fall.

High US stillbirth rate preventable, docs say at U of U facility opening

BY JAMIE LAMPROS
Special to the Daily Herald

On Oct. 19, 2009, Mark and Jaymie Maines were told their full-term baby boy no longer had a heartbeat.

Admitted to the hospital and forced to deliver her still-born son, Jaymie Maines said she had very little support or compassion from her health care provider.

“He was there to do a job and it was obvious neither he nor I wanted to be there,” she said. “The nights after James passed, I was desperate to talk to someone who had a similar loss.”

Maines searched the internet and found a group of women who shared similar stories.

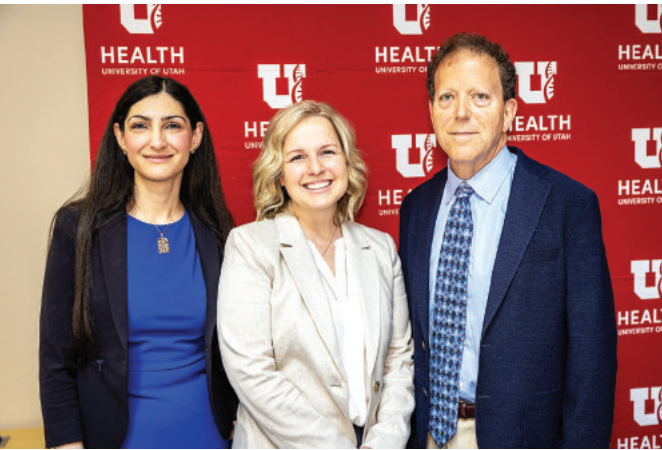

When she wanted to become pregnant again, Maines was terrified of experiencing another loss.

“I was referred to Dr. (Bob) Silver’s office and my anxiety was paralyzing,” she said. “But he sat at the table and discussed our loss with us. I was not just a number. He showed real interest in my loss and mental health.”

Silver, chair of the department of obstetrics and gynecology at the Spencer Fox Eccles School of Medicine at the University of Utah, is now the lead maternal-fetal medicine specialist at the new Utah Pregnancy After Loss Program at University of Utah Health. The multidisciplinary program is the first of its kind in the region and one of the first in the nation to provide both medical and mental health to families suffering from stillbirth losses.

During a press conference and ribbon-cutting ceremony at the new facility last week, Silver spoke about the new program.

“Stillbirth is really one of the saddest and devastating pregnancy complications and it’s far too common in the United States,” he said. “Stillbirth affects 1 in 175 pregnancies. Even though the U.S. has considerable resources, our rate of still-birth is much higher than that of similar countries.”

Silver said the clinic will work hard to provide better treatment, both medically and emotionally, to try to improve outcomes of future pregnancies.

“This program has been developed with the help of families who have been through this,” he said. “They have said, ‘This is what we need and these are the things we’re not getting from the medical system.’ We want you to be heard and give you the best medical and emotional outcomes we can.”

Dr. Rana Jawish, lead psychiatrist and assistant professor in the department of psychiatry at University of Utah Health, said up to 70% of women who have experienced pregnancy loss have had symptoms of anxiety, intrusive memories, flashbacks and fear.

“This meets the criteria of post-traumatic stress disorder,” she said. “Screening and treating these complications, along with providing medical care, is essential to improve the overall outcome. We need to do better at preventing future pregnancy loss and work on the research part.”

The new program is modeled after the Rainbow Clinic, which was developed by Alex

Heazell at the University of Manchester. The new clinic will offer a tailored approach to care by combining medical expertise with compassion and support for individuals and families. The program also will provide an opportunity for families to participate in research studies.

“We have a lot to learn and a lot of work to do,” Silver said. “That’s where our team will tackle these issues. We need to do better in preventing pregnancy loss, and our data will help in the research part.”

Since her loss in 2009, Maines said Silver has delivered three of her children.

“He showed genuine care and interest and even called me while he was boarding a plane to see how I was doing,” she said. “That goes a long way for a mother who originally felt abandoned by her health care provider.”

The National Institutes of Health reports that more than 20,000 pregnancies each year are lost at 20 weeks or more. The report, titled “Working to Address the Tragedy of Stillbirth,” states how critical it is for patients to have access to specialized and holistic care after experiencing such a loss.

Below the Surface of Varicose Veins

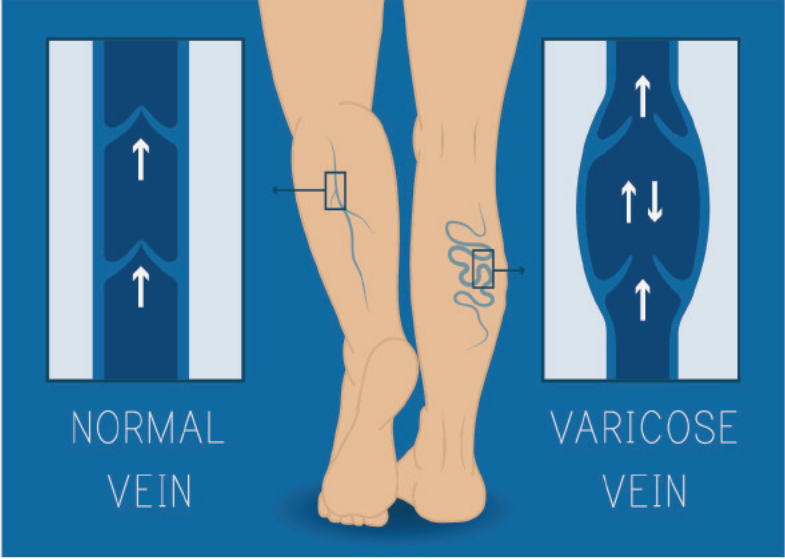

BY REISHA ZANG

Even when we do our best to ignore it, our bodies change over the years. But not every symptom can be chalked up to aging. Varicose veins are an example of something that pops up as we get older. They are a common sign of Chronic Venous Insufficiency (CVI). Other signs of CVI include a feeling of heaviness in your legs; fatigue or aching in your leg muscles; swelling, skin discoloration, tenderness, or soreness; wounds that don’t heal; or leg cramps at night.

“That feeling of heaviness or aching legs creeps up on people,” says Dr. Ryan O’Hara of Comprehensive Integrated Care. “It’s easy to think, ‘this is just what legs feel like at this age’, but that’s not necessarily true.” Symptoms like varicose veins or fatigue in your leg muscles can keep you from your everyday living. Dr.

Dr. O’Hara is an endovascular specialist. He treats a variety of conditions throughout the body, with a special focus on PAD and vein conditions.

O’Hara cautions, “Limiting your activities is not the answer. These symptoms are a warning that your circulatory system isn’t working properly, and you need to see a doctor.”

Your circulatory system is responsible for moving blood throughout your body. Your heart acts a pump. Arteries carry the blood away from the heart and veins carry it back. When your leg veins are unable to bring the blood back to the heart, CVI develops. “There are one-way valves in your veins that work to keep blood flowing in the right direction,” explains O’Hara. “The veins in your legs must work against the force of gravity to get the blood up to your heart and the valves help do that. When the valves don’t well, the blood can flow backwards and collect in your legs.”

“The good news is this condition is very manageable,” says O’Hara. “We have treatments which can relieve the symptoms and improve the way your legs look.”

Treatment is directed at shutting down the vein. “The body eventually absorbs the closed vein,” explains O’Hara. “There is no cause for concern when unhealthy veins are eliminated, your body reroutes the blood to healthier veins improving flow in the leg. Most people notice a significant improvement within days.

Dr. O’Hara’s best advice for those with varicose veins and symptoms of CVI, “Talk to a doctor, don’t let your legs keep you from running errands or doing activities you enjoy.”

ANTITRUST LAWSUIT

Uncertain if Colorado case will be in NCAA settlement

BY RALPH D. RUSSO
Associated Press

As the NCAA moved closer Wednesday to a $2.8 billion settlement that could resolve three antitrust lawsuits — with the Big Ten the latest conference to give its approval — it was uncertain whether a fourth case will also be part of the agreement.

Attorneys in Fontenot v. the NCAA said they would like their case to the stay in federal court in Colorado instead of being moved to California and combined with another antitrust lawsuit involving college sports. They said they won't know whether their claims would be covered by the settlement until they have all the details of the proposal.

“One way or the other, they have to deal with us or I just don't see how a settlement ultimately gets done,” said George Zelcs, one of the plaintiffs' attorneys. “They have to either include us or get an order that requires us to be involved in it. All of which we have arguments against as well.”

The NCAA and five major college conferences named in the House v. NCAA lawsuit that is at the center of settlement talks have asked U.S. District Judge Charlotte Sweeney in Colorado to combine the Fontenot case with Carter v. the NCAA, which is being heard in the Northern District of California.

Attorneys for the plaintiffs in House v. the NCAA have given the defendants a today deadline to agree to a settlement. As expected, the NCAA completed its three-part approval process Wednesday night with its 15-member Board of Governors voting unanimously to accept the proposal — with one member abstaining — according to two people with direct knowledge of the vote. The people spoke to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity because the NCAA was not publicly revealing its internal process.

The Big 12 and Atlantic Coast Conference presidential boards voted to move forward with the settlement on Tuesday. Big Ten presidents voted to approve the deal Wednesday during spring meetings in Los Angeles, a person with direct knowledge of the decision told AP on condition of anonymity because the conference was not making its internal discussions public.

Southeastern Conference and Pac-12 presidents are scheduled to meet today and consider the settlement agreement.

Under terms of the proposed agreement, the NCAA will pay $2.77 billion over 10 years to former and current college athletes who were denied by now-defunct rules the ability to earn money

Springville rallies for emotional win

BY JARED LLOYD
Daily Herald

Springville senior pitcher Ryann Haveron felt an enormous amount of emotion as she stood outside the dugout at Valley Softball Complex in Taylorsville after Wednesday's 5A semifinal game against Bountiful.

And there were good reasons for it. Earlier that day, she had joined the three other Red Devil seniors on the field before the game to celebrate graduating from high school, which is always a big accomplishment.

She had also seen her sisters, junior shortstop Tyler Haveron and sophomore first baseman Allyx Haveron, make some key plays for Springville during the game.

But the biggest reason for the strong feelings was because for the last three years she had given everything she had to see her Red Devils get a chance to win a title, only to fall short of the championship.

That, however, would not be the case in 2024.

Ryann Haveron and Springville rallied from three different three-run deficits to defeat the Redhawks, 10-7, and finally reach the 5A state title series.

“I just want to say thank you to all my teammates,” Ryann Haveron said. “It's crazy. We've had this team for four years and we've never made it. All the work we put in to get here, it finally paid off.”

Red Devil head coach Jill Thackeray said she's so proud to see this team make it to the championship.

“Every year they really believe that they can do it and they just haven't been able to get over the hump,” Thackeray said. “We've been inches away in so many different games over the last five or six years. I just felt like we could finally get a ball to go our way. They're so excited. I've never seen so much togetherness from them. It's just so much. They want it so much and it's so fun to be a part of.”

It wasn't easy, though, as Bountiful was determined to give everything it had as well.

The Redhawks came out aggressive and scored three runs in the top of the first to take control. After Springville got a run in the bottom of the third, Bountiful answered with a solo home run in the top of the fourth to keep the 4-1 lead.

“We were so tight and playing not to lose instead of playing to win,” Thackeray said. “We made some uncharacteristic errors that we haven't made really all year. We were getting runners on base but we just couldn't get the timely hit. So the message was to be patient. It's a long seven-inning game.”

Springville also knew that Bountiful star pitcher Ella Miller had thrown a lot of pitches over the last couple of days and felt like there would be opportunities as she wore down a little bit.

The Red Devils made a move in the bottom of the fourth, getting some key hits (including one from Tyler Haveron, who went 4-of-5 on the day) to plate three runs and tie the game.

MAKING A COMEBACK

Chrisman blast moves Maple Mountain into 5A finals; No. 1 AF eliminated from 6A

BY DARNELL DICKSON
Daily Herald

Having played Maple Mountain three previous times, Salem Hills knows how dangerous it is to pitch to sophomore Cy Chrisman.

Chrisman made the Skyhawks pay in a big way in Wednesday's 5A state tournament game at UCCU Ballpark, bashing a towering two-run homer to left field in the sixth inning for the go-ahead runs in a 6-5 comeback victory for the Golden Eagles.

“Cy has size and presence but he's a very plate-disciplined hitter, so he doesn't swing at many pitches off the plate,” Maple Mountain coach Jeremy Thomas said. “When he gets two strikes on him, he takes a good two-strike approach. Then he just tries to put the ball in play. His size and strength allows that ball to carry.”

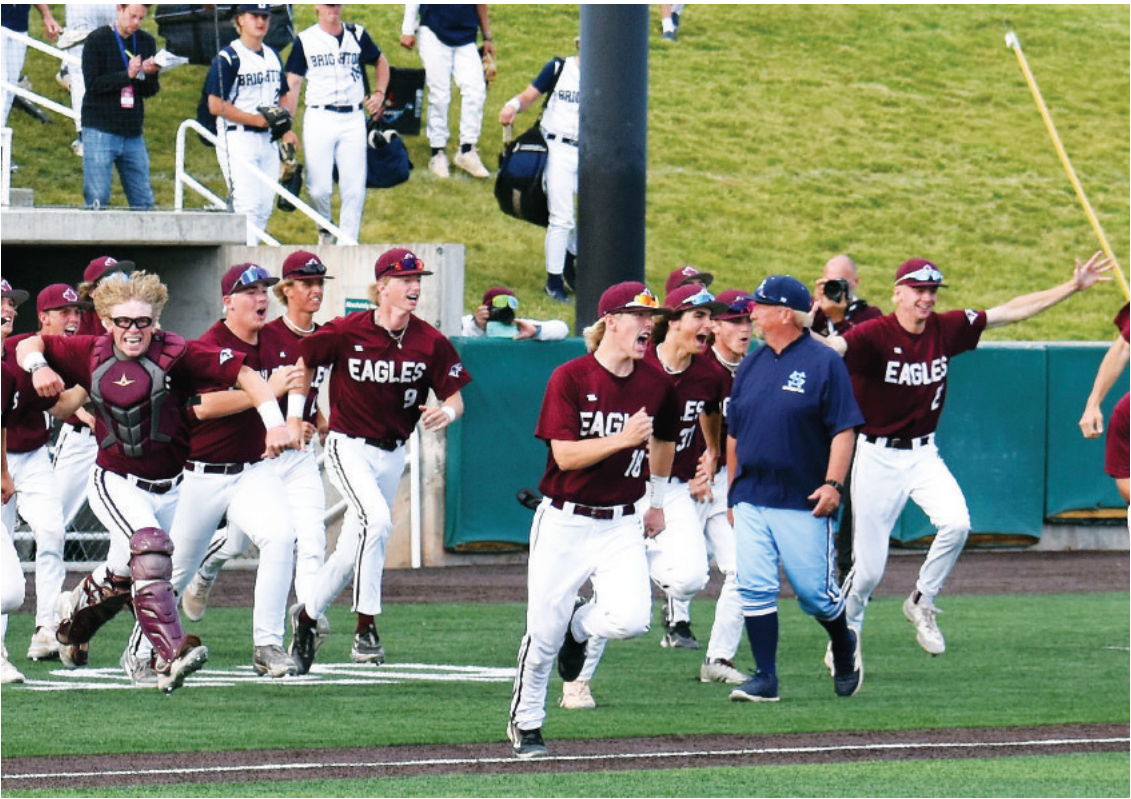

No. 2 seed Maple Mountain trailed 5-2 entering the bottom of the sixth. A.J. Thomas came through with a clutch two-run single to trim the deficit to 5-4. With one out and one on, Chrisman stepped to the plate.

In the fourth, with two outs and two runners on, Salem Hills opted to intentionally walk Chrisman and the next batter grounded into a fielder's choice to end the inning.

This time, the Skyhawks elected to let reliever Corbin Gull pitch to him.

“JT (Thomas) came up and kind of calmed me down because when you have a situation like that your heart kind of starts running,” Chrisman said. “So he told me to get that one pitch that I wanted. Sure enough they gave me that one pitch and that's what happened.”

Chrisman ripped a fastball that stayed in the air for what seemed like forever before it dropped beyond the left field fence to give Maple Mountain a 6-5 lead.

DARNELL DICKSON, DAILY HERALD

The Maple Mountain baseball team erupts from the dugout after winning a 5A state tournament game against Salem Hills at UCCU Ballpark on Wednesday.

“From the moment I hit it, I knew it was gone,” Chrisman said. “The energy from the crowd as that thing was going, I could feel it. Everyone was kind of holding their breath.”

Chrisman, who hit his ninth home run of the season, is the son of former Provo standout Jed Chrisman and nephew to former BYU baseball and basketball player Jake Chrisman.

Thomas said he can empathize with what opposing coaches are going through when Chrisman comes to the plate.

“I mean we did the same thing last year against Springville,” he said. “They have a big guy (Junior Lauaki) and we intentionally walked him 11 out of 12 times because we have so much respect for him. That's a tough decision because you just don't know what to do. We were just lucky enough that Cy got a pitch that he could hit today.”

Salem Hills got the tying run to second base against reliever Bennett Averett with two outs in the top of the seventh. Averett got Roper Kay to pop up to first base and Chase Johnston squeezed it to end the game.

The Skyhawks (20-11) put up two in the top of the first on an RBI single by Alex Cloward and a ground out from Kason Averett. Averett and Chase DeGraffenried each drove in a run in the third for a 4-0 lead. An error on a long fly ball by Chrisman pushed across the first run of the game for Maple Mountain in the third and Bennett Averett hit a solo shot in the fourth to cut the lead to 4-2. Ledger Holmes tripled and came home on a sacrifice fly by Gull to give Salem Hills the 5-2 lead it would take into the fateful sixth inning.

“Our approach always is to fight and try to get that starting pitcher out of the lineup and then once we do that, our second goal is to double our run production,” Thomas said. “We've done it all year. We've been a comeback team. Today we did the same thing so it's nothing new to us.”

Maple Mountain (26-4) moves on to the best-of-three championship series, which begins with Game 1 on Friday. The Golden Eagles will play the winner of No. 1 seed Brighton and No. 4 seed Springville. If the Red Devils win in Wednesday's late game, the two teams would play again Thursday in an elimination contest.

Spanish Fork gets defensive to defeat Box Elder Spanish Fork senior pitcher Lucy Evans throws a pitch during the 5A playoff game against Box Elder at Valley Softball Complex in Taylorsville on Wednesday.

JARED LLOYD, DAILY HERALD

The Spanish Fork softball team barely escaped with a dramatic 10-9 win over Box Elder in Tuesday's second game in 5A bracket play, but it resulted in a more determined effort when the two teams met again on Wednesday with a spot in the championship series on the line.

“It was absolutely a wake-up call,” Don head coach Natalyn Jarvis said. “We needed to make some adjustments. Today was a total team effort. Yesterday we were going through the motions a little bit but today they came out to win.”

That was particularly true for Spanish Fork senior pitcher Lucy

Evans, who knew the Dons could do better than they did on Tuesday.

“We just wanted to come in rested, come in ready to play,” Evans said. “It was a special day because of graduation, obviously. We were just trying to leave it all out on the field.”

Jarvis said that she reminded Evans that these moments are what she has worked for.

“I did say to her yesterday that she has been waiting on the bench for three years for this opportunity,” Jarvis said. “She's been an incredible teammate, and she's been riding behind (former Spanish Fork star pitcher Avery Sapp) for three years. Lucy has a lot to offer and I think she was like, 'you're right, I have been.

I'm going go out and lead my troops! I think she just had that mindset to take charge and go get the win for her team.”

Evans did just that, keeping the Bee bats quiet for most of the game as Spanish Fork earned the 4-1 win and the spot in the title series for the fourth straight season.

“It was pretty surreal to get that last out,” Evans said. “It was just so fun to get to fulfill that dream and just take the team as far as we can get. That's not something that many times. And finally I get to do it from the field instead of the dugout.”

Celtics and Pacers attempting to overcome bad habits

BY KYLE HIGHTOWER
Associated Press

BOSTON — There was a dominant refrain ringing in Jayson Tatum’s head following the Celtics’ comeback 133-128 overtime win over the Pacers to open the Eastern Conference finals. “Don’t relax,” he said. In each of the previous two rounds, Boston opened its series with Miami and Cleveland with lopsided victories, only to then lose Game 2. The Pacers have experienced the opposite, dropping Game 1 in Rounds 1 and 2 and then having to regroup to overtake Milwaukee and New York.

Tyrese Haliburton’s take-away from Indiana’s latest Game 1 setback against the East’s top seed? Be disappointed. But don’t fret.

“We know we can play with these guys,” Haliburton said. “There’s a lot of people out there saying we don’t belong here. We don’t really care. We know we belong.”

What’s clear is that how both teams adjust for Game 2 on Thursday night will set the tone for the balance of this series.

Recent history aside, the similarities between the Celtics and Pacers were on display throughout Game 1.

Both teams thrived offensively this season and did so again, combining for 261 points Tuesday night. It was the highest scoring game of this postseason and the most in a conference finals game since Boston and Detroit totaled 264 in Game 4 of the 1987 East finals.

What was also on display were both teams’ vulnerabilities. Indiana exploited Boston’s weakened interior defense throughout, racking up 56 points in the paint. But the Celtics ultimately prevailed, benefiting from a myriad of mistakes by a young Pacers team short on playoff experience.

Haliburton had two key turnovers to help the Celtics rebound from a five-point deficit in the final two minutes of regulation. First, he dribbled off his foot as he was bringing the ball up the floor with less than 30 seconds remaining in a three-point game. He also fumbled the ball out of bounds with just over a minute to play in OT.

The two miscues were part of 22 turnovers on the night for a Pacers team that came in averaging fewer than 12 per game in these playoffs.

It’s part of the growing pains Indiana coach Rick

Carlisle expected his youth-heavy team would have to endure during this playoff run.

“You have to go through it to really experience what it’s all about,” Carlisle said. “We try to help prepare them for those experiences. But there’s nothing like going through it.”

Likewise, Boston learned

T.J. McConnell (13 points), who helped Indiana’s reserve outscore its Boston counterparts 30-13.

It’s yet another wrinkle that makes the Pacers a hard team to prepare for, Celtics coach Joe Mazzulla said.

“With their ability to play different lineups, the way they sub — they sub two or three different guys at a time. They are willing to go away from sub patterns for certain guys,” Mazzulla said. “You have to be wary of going to any and everything at any particular time. ... Anything is on the table versus a team like this because of their versatility.”

Tatum is expecting both teams to play with renewed confidence in Game 2.

“(Game 1) being a close game going into overtime they certainly feel like they probably should have won. And we feel like we can play a lot better,” he said. “So, I’m excited for us to come out and respond. And just do a better job of protecting home court than we have done recently.”

LeBron James extends his All-NBA appearance record

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — LeBron James is now the youngest — and the oldest — player to make an All-NBA team. And Dallas’ Luka Doncic and Oklahoma City’s Shai Gilgeous-Alexander are in position to make around $1 million per game a few years from now.

Denver’s Nikola Jokic and Gilgeous-Alexander were the only unanimous first-team selections on this season’s All-NBA team, which was revealed by the league on Wednesday night. They were joined on the first team by Doncic, Milwaukee’s Giannis Antetokounmpo and Boston’s Jayson Tatum.

On the second team: New York’s Jalen Brunson, Minnesota’s Anthony Edwards, Phoenix’s Kevin Durant, the Los Angeles Clippers’ Kawhi Leonard and James’ Los Angeles Lakers teammate, Anthony Davis.

The third team had James, Golden State’s Stephen Curry, Sacramento’s Domantas Sabonis, Indiana’s Tyrese Haliburton and Phoenix’s Devin Booker.

The NBA changed the rules starting with this season and All-NBA voting is now positionless — as opposed to having two guards, two forwards and one center on each of the teams, a formula that had been in place since the 1950s. Players also had to appear in a minimum number of games, in most cases, to be eligible for award consideration from the panel of 99 broadcasters and writers who served as the voting panel.

For James, who was the youngest player to make All-NBA when he was voted onto the team for the 2004-05 season, another selection only added to his list of accomplishments.

The 20 All-NBA overall picks extended his record, a total that’s now five more than Kobe Bryant, Tim Duncan and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar. His 20 consecutive selections is obviously another record, and he’s the first player to be age 39 or older during what became an All-NBA regular season.

Abdul-Jabbar and Duncan were both just a few days from turning 39 when the regular seasons ended in what became their final All-NBA campaigns, Abdul-Jabbar’s being 1985-86 and Duncan’s being 2014-15. James — the NBA’s career scoring leader — played in 71 games this season, the last 42 of those coming after he turned 39.

And for Doncic and Gilgeous-Alexander, the All-NBA nods mean they are poised for supermax extensions that can be signed in 2025, both of which would set records.

Doncic can sign a five-year deal worth about $347 million, starting at nearly $60 million in 2026-27 and ending at about $79 million in 2030-31. Gilgeous-Alexander will be eligible to sign a four-year extension worth about $294 million. His would start in 2027-28 at around $65 million — and the final year, 2030-31, would see him earning just over $81 million, or nearly $1 million per game. It would be the first time an NBA player’s annual salary has topped $80 million.

Also seeing major financial boosts from their All-NBA selections were Edwards and Haliburton, both of whom agreed to extensions last summer that were to be worth about $205 million — and now will be worth about $245 million over the next five seasons.

Durant made All-NBA for the 11th time, tying for the 12th-most in NBA history.

Flower power

This full moon has the feel of a slumber party. The close vicinity of friends will bring enough joyful adrenaline to fuel a night filled with more laughter than sleep. Names for the full moon in Sagittarius include the hare moon, corn planting moon and milk moon. But the one most fitting now is the flower moon, as the youthful energy opens like a fresh blossom.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). A secret can be fun, like a spring-loaded surprise, or it can be more like a burdensome rock that weighs you down. With the latter kind, it's not possible to be fully effective while also managing how to hide the information. Consider declassifying it.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). To some extent you can manage how you feel and deal, and you'll do all you can, though it's good to recognize that it's not always within your control. Offer self-compassion on the matter, as processing styles vary from brain to brain.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). The variety of tones you bring to interactions makes a relationship interesting and beautiful. Sometimes you do this on purpose, but it's always nice when it happens organically because the other person really brings out different facets of you.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). Through consistency, you are building trust in a relationship. You'll be punctual and show up strong, knowing that every little gesture counts. You'll meet expectations time and again until you eventually exceed them.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). Old patterns, items and even relationships will be categorized. You're seeing with stark clarity what is useful and what isn't. You'll file, refine or apply what's useful. As for the rest, you'll retire it.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). It's not always the case, but today the presence of loved ones will lift you up and remind you of your worth. Also, you will have to be strong for someone else — a gift that will reveal to you your own strength.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). It's natural to assume others have similar strengths and abilities to our own. But, as you will note from today's discourse, just because a lot of people have a certain set of life skills doesn't mean everyone does.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). The quality of your work will depend on the information you gather before you begin. If you spend the entire day researching, it will pay off in the end. You'll arrive at conclusions you weren't expecting.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Some people seem to need saving on a regular basis. You've come to the rescue before, and you'll do it again. But at some point, you have to wonder if it's keeping someone from helping themselves.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). In some games, the only way to win is not to play. Avoid toxic cultures defined by aggression and competition. Focus on improving your own work in your own way.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Responsiveness to the challenge at hand requires versatility. Counterintuitive moves will be necessary to stay on track. It's like keeping a car on the road. Sometimes you must steer left and other times right.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). Your actions are not the only things that affect others. Attitude and energy level are highly influential factors. Feel good about what you do, and do what you feel good about.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (May 23). A year of discovery and rapid development into the person you want to be. The "ah-ha" moments will be numerous though understated — no fireworks, but nonetheless transformative. More highlights: a dream makeover of one area of your life, the means to cross a big one off your bucket list, and a reward for giving knowledge and wisdom to the next generation. Libra and Capricorn adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 18, 13, 20, 25 and 7.

Notice of Public Comment

The Bureau of Reclamation, working with Southern Utah Valley Power Systems (SUVPS), is providing the public with the opportunity to review the negotiated draft of the title transfer agreement for 30 days beginning May 1, 2024. The draft title transfer agreement can be found at: https://www.usbr.gov/uc/provo/index.html

Through development of the Strawberry Valley Project, the United States holds title to the 46kV Power Transmission System and related easements serving south Utah Valley - namely, the communities of Spanish Fork City, Springville City, Payson City, Salem City, and the unincorporated communities of Elk Ridge and Woodland Hills. The Strawberry Valley Project repayment contract was fulfilled in December of 1974, and there are no further repayment obligations for the project. The 46kV Power Transmission System is proposed to be transferred to SUVPS to reduce administrative costs, increase operational efficiencies, and enable SUVPS to fund improvements for the system. SUVPS and its predecessors have provided electrical utility services related to the transmission system for nearly 5-decades. Reclamation formally recognized SUVPS as the O&M contractor for the transmission system in 2015.

For more information, please contact Bryan Schmutz, Project Manager, Provo Area Office at 801-379-1245 or bschmutz@usbr.gov.
