

From: James Logan
To: mlivingston@utah.gov
Date: 1/21/2009 8:53 AM
Subject: Fwd: C.N.G. gas hike

UTAH PUBLIC
SERVICE COMMISSION

>>> mark curtis
To whome this may concern.

> 1/5/2009 8:43 PM >>>

2009 JAN 21 P 5:30

160540

I'm not big on words and I do not know a whole lot about whats going on because of the holidays. But I feel I need to start making a voice on things that are wrong.

RECEIVED

I bought a N.G.V. this last year in an effort to get off my dependents of foreign fuel and petroleum. I know that a CNG vehicles still requires oil for the engine, but when you can go 10,000 miles on an oil change it reduces the amount of used oil put out by a car. Also as far as the resurch that I have done, the emissions on a CNG vehicle are basicaly none compaired to a gas vehicle.

Why then would you make it so people would not want to get a car that is saveing the environment, in more than just the emissions that are put out.

I am also a questar gas buyer at my house, and I have went to energy saving appliances and I also use radient heating in my house and I still keep the thermostate at 70 degrees in the winter. I would have to agree on some of the letters that I have read. You dont charge extra to those homes who wont do anything to try and make there place energy efficient so why would you charge someone an extra price if they are trying to help make the air cleaner and use less patroleum.

Wasnt it Govener Huntsman who had an entire fleet of government vehicle's converted to C.N.G, I dont remember. Do whats right for the people that are trying to make things better.

The letters I have read say it better than I can and I back those letters 100%.

Respectfully yours

Mark Curtis