SUBJECT:

I am very angry at the public service commission's decision to raise natural gas rates for vehicles. This is a total contradiction to your promotion of clean air fuels. I just spent $5000 to convert my truck to natural gas to make it more affordable to drive to work, and reduce dependance on foreign oil, and clean the air. Now the state wants to make it the same price as gasoline. What is the incentive? Just to make the air cleaner is not enough. People will use what is cheaper. I would like to know where the price increase is going? Is Questar going to profit from this, or is the state? I would like a response to these questions, and what, if anything is going to be done.
