If I was not aware about the inconsistencies with other bills, I would have believed that this was just normal but knowing that another property did not skyrocket in usage, I have to question this bills too. This property has been empty for almost a year in a half, and the usage also skyrocketed around the time that they came to spraypaint the meter.

I was there when they spraypainted the meter. Question: why are you spraying the meter? Answer: To keep the corrosion out of the meter.

Me thinking: So, the meters are not sealed? So, what keeps the spraypaint from getting in the meter?

I would also like to know when exactly the meter at this address was spraypainted. For the reason that they missed a meter that didn't have any problem skyrocketing in usage whatsoever.
