Okay, as silly as this may seem, we just had to tell someone that we think that this overlay is absurd! Who thought of this? (That is rhetorical of course.) We have lived in larger cities, with more people and have never had anything so ridiculous as to have to dial ten digits for local calls. Ugh! I think that someone must have owed someone a favor, because there had to be better ideas than this. In all seriousness, this really is a pain in the behind, and someone really ought to think hard before they do something like this to any other cities. This was not the best choice, and I hope that in the future, our government will rack their brains harder to find a better alternative to their phone number dilemmas. I am sorry that you being innocent in all of this had to be the recipient of the complaint, but since you are the complaint person, here you are. Thanks for being the complaint person. Have a good day. Sincerely, The Clarks
